They are enforced of very necessity to press the best and greatest part of their men out of the West countries, which is no small charge. Raleigh.

The endeavour to raise new men for the recruit of the army by pressing, found opposition in many places. Clarendon.

The peaceful peasant to the wars is press, Dryden.
Must grandon Filbert to the wars be press, Gay.

You were pressed for the sea-service, and got off with much Swiss.
To press. v. n.

1. To act with compulsive violence; to urge; to distress. If there be fair proofs on the one side, and none at all on the other, and if the most pressing difficulties be on that side, on which there are no proofs, this is sufficient to render one opinion very credible, and the other altogether incredible. Tillotson's Sermons.

A great many uneasinesses always soliciting the will, it is natural, that the greatest and most pressing should determine it to the next action. Locke.

2. To go forward with violence to any object. I make bold to press With so little preparation. Shakespeare.

—You're welcome. Phil. iii. 14.
I press toward the mark for the prize. Phil. iii. 14.
The Turks gave a great shout, and pressed in on all sides, to have entered the breach. Kneller.

Thronging crowds press on you as you pass, And with their eager joy make triumph flow. Dryden.

Th' insulting victor presses on the more, And treads the steps the vanquish'd trod before. Dryden.

She is always drawn in a posture of walking, it being as natural for Hope to press forward to her proper objects, as for Fear to fly from them. Addison on Ancient Medals.

Let us not therefore faint, or be weary in our journey, much less turn back or sit down in despair; but press cheerfully forward to the high mark of our calling. Rogers.

3. To make invasion; to encroach. On superior powers Were we to press, inferior might on ours. Pope.

4. To crowd; to throng. To crowd; to throng. For he had healed many, inasmuch that they pressed upon him for to touch him. Mar. iii. 10.

Counsel the may; and I will give thy ear The knowledge first of what is fit to hear: What I transact with others or alone, Beware to learn; nor press too near the throne. Dryden.

5. To come unseasonably or importunately. To urge with vehemence and importunity. He pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in. Gen.

The less blood he drew, the more he took of treasure; and, as some construed it, he was the more sparing in the one, that he might be the more pressing in the other. Bacon.

So thick the shivering army stands, And press for passage with extended hands. Dryden.

7. To act upon or influence. When arguments press equally in matters indifferent, the safest method is to give up ourselves to neither. Addison.

8. To press upon. To invade; to push against. Patroclus presses upon Hector too boldly, and by obliging him to fight, discovers it was not the true Achilles. Pope.

9. Press. n. f. [from press, Fr. from the verb.] The instrument by which any thing is crushed or squeezed. The press is full, the fats overflow. Jad. iii. 13.

When one came to the press fats to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty. Hag. ii. 16.

The stomach and intestines are the press, and the lacteal vessels the strainers, to separate the pure emulsion from the feces. Arbutnot.

They kept their cloaths, when they were not worn, constantly in a press, to give them a lustre. Arbutnot.

2. The instrument by which books are printed. The genuine letters are of the second edition; he will print them out of doubt, for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two in. Shakespeare.

3. Croud; tumult; throng. Paul and Barnabas, when infidels admiring their virtues, went about to sacrifice unto them, rent their garments in token of horror, and as frightened, ran crying through the press of the people, O men wherefore do ye these things. Hooker.

She held a great gold chain yinked well, Whose upper end to highest heaven was knit, And lower part did reach to lowest hell, And all that press did round about her swell, To catchen hold of that long chain. Fairy Queen.

Who is it in the press that calls on me? I hear a tongue, shriller than all the musick, Cry, Caesar. Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.

Death having prey'd upon the outward parts, Leaves them invisible; his siege is now Against the mind; the which he pricks and wounds With many legions of strange fantasies; Each.

Which in their throng, and press to that last hold, Confound themselves. Shakespeare, King Lear.

Ambitious Turnus in the press appears, And aggravating crimes augment their fears. Dryden.

A new express all Agra does affright, Darah and Aurengzebe are join'd in fight; The press of people thickens to the court, Th' impatient croud devouring the report. Dryden.

Through the press enrag'd Thalestris flies, And scatters deaths around from both her eyes. Pope.

4. A kind of wooden case or frame for cloaths and other uses. Creep into the kill hole.—Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk; but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places. Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor.

5. A commission to force men into military service. For press, If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a fow'd garnet; I have misus'd the king's press damnably. Shakespeare.

Concerning the mulsters and presses for sufficient mariners to serve in his majesty's ships, either the care is very little, or the bribery very great. Raleigh.

6. Press. n. f. [from press and bed.] Bed so formed, as to be shut up in a case. Shakespeare.

7. Press. n. f. [from press.] One that presses or works at a press. Of the stuff I give the profits to dyers and pressers. Swift.

8. Press. n. f. [from press and gang.] A crew that strols about the streets to force men into naval service. Shakespeare.

9. Press. n. f. [from press.] With force; closely. The one contracts his words, speaking pressingly and short; the other delights in long-breathed accents. Howell.

10. Press. n. f. [from press.] The act of pressing. If light confided only in pression, propagated without actual motion, it would not be able to agitate and heat the bodies, which retract and reflect it: if it confided in motion, propagated to all distances in an instant, it would require an infinite force every moment, in every shining particle, to generate that motion; and if it confided in pression or motion, propagated either in an instant or in time, it would bend into the shadow. Newton's Opticks.

11. Press. n. f. [from press.] Gravitating; heavy. A word not in use. Neither the celestial matter of the vortices, nor the air, nor water are pressant in their proper places. Mars.

12. Press. n. f. [from press and man.] One who forces another into service; one who forces away. One only path to all; by which the pressmen came. Chop.

13. Press. n. f. [from press.] The impression of print by the press: distinct from the compositor, who ranges the types. One who makes the impression of print by the press: distinct from the compositor, who ranges the types. Shakespeare.

14. Press. n. f. [from press and money.] Money given to a soldier when he is taken or forced into the service. Here Peasegod, take my pouch, 'tis all I own, 'Tis my pressmoney.—Can this silver fail? Gay.

15. Press. n. f. [from press.] The act of pressing or crushing. 1. The act of pressing or crushing. 2. The state of being pressed or crushed. 3. Force acting against any thing; gravitation; pression. The inequality of the pressure of parts appeareth in this; that if you take a body of stone, and another of wood of the same magnitude and shape, and throw them with equal force, you cannot throw the wood so far as the stone. Bacon.

4. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] The force of the heart above the vessels by the excess of the force of the heart above the incumbent pressure, which in fat people is excessive. Arbutnot.

5. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] Violence inflicted; oppression. A wife father ingenuously confessed, that those, which persuaded pressure of consciences, were commonly interested therein. Bacon's Essays.

6. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] Affliction; grievance; distress. Mine own and my people's pressures are grievous, and peace would be very pleasing. King Charles.

7. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] The genuine price of lands in England would be twenty years purchase, were it not for accidental pressures under which it labours. Child's Discourse of Trade.

8. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] To this consideration he retreats, in the midst of all his pressures, with comfort; in this thought, notwithstanding the sad afflictions with which he was overwhelmed, he mightily exults. Atterbury's Sermons.

9. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] Excellent was the advice of Elephas to Job, in the midst of his great troubles and pressures, acquaint thyself now with God, and be at peace. Atterbury.

10. Pressure. n. f. [from press.] Impression; stamp; character made by impression. From my memory I'll wipe away all trivial fond records, All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past, That youth and observation copy'd there. Shakespeare.

11. Pressure. n. f. [from press or pret, Fr.] Ready; not dilatory. This is said to have been the original sense of the word press men; men, not forced into the service, as now we understand it, but men, for a certain sum received, press or ready to march at command. Each.

PRE

Each mind is press, and open every ear, To hear new tidings, though they no way joy us. Fairfax.

Gritus desired nothing more than, at his first entrance, to have confirmed the opinion of his authority in the minds of the vulgar people, by the press and ready attendance of the Vayvod. Kneller's Hist. of the Turks.

2. Neat; tight. In both senses the word is obsolete. More wealth any where, to be breese More people, more handsome and press Where find ye? Tusser's Husbandry.

3. Press. n. f. [from press, Fr.] A loan. He required of the city a press of six thousand marks; but, after many parleys, he could obtain but two thousand pounds. Bacon's Henry VII.

7. Press. n. f. [from press.] Begone! 'tis here again; There's every piece as big as ten. Swift.

8. Press. n. f. [from press.] Without examination. Authors presumably writing by common places, wherein, for many years, promiscuously amassing all that make for their subject, break forth at last into useless rhapsodies. Brown.

9. Press. n. f. [from press, Fr.] Presume, Lat.] 1. To suppose; to believe previously without examination. O much deceiv'd, much failing, hapless Eve! Of thy presum'd return! event perverse! Milton.

2. To suppose; to affirm without immediate proof. Experience supplants the use of conjecture in the point; we do not only presume it may be so, but actually find it is so. Government of the Tongue.

3. To suppose; to affirm without immediate proof. Although in the relation of Moses there be very few persons mentioned, yet are there many more to be presumed. Brown.

4. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] That as my hand has open'd bounty to you, My heart dropp'd love; my pow'r rain'd honour more On you, than any. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

5. To venture without positive leave. There was a matter we were no less desirous to know, than fearful to ask, lest we might presume too far. Bacon.

6. To form confident or arrogant opinions. The life of Ovid being already written in our language, I will not presume to far upon myself, to think I can add any thing to Mr. Sandys's undertaking. Dryden.

7. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] This man presumes upon his parts, that they will not fail him at time of need, and so thinks it superfluous labour to make any provision beforehand. Locke.

8. To make confident or arrogant attempts. In this we fail to perform the thing, which God seeth meet, convenient and good; in that we presume to see what is meet and convenient, better than God himself. Hooker.

9. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] God, to remove his ways from human sense, Plac'd heav'n from earth so far, that earthly light, If it presume, might err in things too high, And no advantage gain. Milton's Par. Lost, b. viii.

10. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] It has on or upon sometimes before the thing supposed, or causing presumption. He, that would not deceive himself, ought to build his hypothesis on matter of fact, and not presume on matter of fact, because of his hypothesis. Locke.

11. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] Luther presumes upon the gift of continency. Atterbury.

12. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] It has of sometimes, but not properly. Presuming of his force, with sparkling eyes, Already he devours the promis'd prize. Dryden.

13. Presume. n. f. [from presume.] One that presupposes; an arrogant person. Heavy with some high minds is an overweight of obligation; otherwise great deivers do grow intolerable presumers. Wotton.

14. Presumption. n. f. [from presumptus, Lat. presumption, Fr.] Supposition previously formed. Thou hast shew'd us how unsafe it is to offend thee, upon presumptions afterwards to please thee. King Charles.

15. Presumption. n. f. [from presumptus, Lat. presumption, Fr.] Though men in general believed a future state, yet they had but confused presumptions of the nature and condition of it. Reg.

16. Presumption. n. f. [from presumptus, Lat. presumption, Fr.] Confidence grounded on any thing presupposed. A presumption, upon this aid, was the principal motive for the undertaking. Clarendon, b. viii.

17. Presumption. n. f. [from presumptus, Lat. presumption, Fr.] Those at home held their immoderate engrossments of power by no other tenure, than their own presumption upon the necessity of affairs. Swift's Miscellanies.

18. Presumption. n. f. [from presumptus, Lat. presumption, Fr.] An argument strong, but not demonstrative; a strong probability. The error and insufficiency of their arguments doth make it, on the contrary side against them, a strong presumption, that God hath not moved their hearts to think such things, as he hath not enabled them to prove. Hooker, b. v. f. 10.

19. Presumption. n. f. [from presumptus, Lat. presumption, Fr.] Arrogance; confidence blind and adventurous; presumptuousness.
